"OUTWITTED"-A CHICAGO INCIDENT BY HAMSUN

Foremost Scandinavian Author Tells of His Experience as a Street Car Conductor Twenty-five Years Ago

By KNUT HAMSUN.

English Version by Herman Bernstein. him how much I was getting.

"Would you like to make a ten doffar Knut Hamsun, the foremost Scandi- bill?" he asked navian writer to-day and author of "Hunger," "Victoria," &c.; visited the periences in this country:

WAS a conductor on a street car in on the Halstead line, which ran from ning, are you not?" the centre of the city to the cattle | "I am." there at night. Conductors had no right to shoot and kill people, for the street It is covered with a lid. I will lift that railway company would have to pay a lid and lower myself into that hole."

bok. But then it is very seldom that a move at a moment's notice, and which all Christmas week, and nothing happened to me. One night a crowd rushed in near the cattle market and filled the car. They were all intoxicated and had bottles along with them. They sang loudly and refused had paid their fare to the company all the year round, and now, when Christmas time came, they did not want to pay.

There was nothing queer in their argument, but I did not dare carry them free of charge for fear that there might be some were obliged to watch after the honesty man?" asked one of the passengers

Some of the passengers began to laugh

A year later, around Christmas time,

I was working on the Cottage line. There was a striking difference between these lines. The tramway consisted now of two and sometimes of three cars; the cars were worked by means of an underground cable. The public in that part of the city was better and I had to collect the five

I was going through the cars, he waited pale faced, with a mustache; he was very neatly dressed, but without an overcoat, notwithstanding the sharp cold.

dressing properly," he said. "I wanted

"Exactly," he replied, with a smile

convulsive grimace of the mouth

Duying Christmas presents?" I re-his smile was most peculiar; it was a to overtake my wife."

at me, but there were two or three who now sided with me. They paid for all.

A constable boarded the car. After could be of great service to me. I made mse of it only once

of the conductors

him anything.

man is entirely unarmed. For instance, I "You will stop the car and drag me of had the iron wheel bar which I could re- of the hole, in spite of my resistance."

"Very well!"

I answered that I would.

Without any hesitation he took United States a quarter of a century his pocketbook and handed me a bill, ago. The following was one of his ex-

VAS a conductor on a street car in He asked for my schedule and said:

Chicago. At first I was appointed "You are on duty at 8 o'clock this eve-market. For those of us who worked at night that line was not at all safe, as a number of suspicious characters travelled corner of Monroe street we pass a hole "The lid to the cattle at the "You will have to do me a little service minutes."

"You will have to do me a little service minutes."

"I know the cattle at the "I know to do me a little service minutes."

"I know to the cattle at the "I know to do me a little service minutes."

"Do you want to commit suicide?" As for me, I did not even have a re-volver, and I simply relied upon good pression that I intended to do it." "Oh, no! I simply want to give the im

ing strange in such a question, and I told | "Yes; she will be at the grip, near the

I was surprised. The platform occupied by the motorman was an open place, and it was very cold there in the winter

"She will be there," repeated the gen tleman. "In a letter to her lover she promised to be there this evening. I have seen the letter."

"Very well. But I must caution you to remove the lid and get down quickly. Otherwise the following car may jump on you. The cars pass there every three

"I know all that," answered the man "The tid will be removed before I come there." "Another question. How will you know just when your wife is coming?" "I will get the information over the telephone. I have people watching her. My wife will wear a brown fur coat. You mention anything to him."

"I DIDN'T THINK IT NECESSARY," I REPLIED, "FOR I AM DEALING WITH GENTLEMEN."

"Very well." "On nearing Monroe street go over to the motorman's platform and watch carefully. When you see my head above the hole signal to stop the car. The motorman will help you to overpower me and puil me out of the hole, although I will keep insisting that I want to die."

I thought the matter over a while and

"It seems to me that you could have saved your money. All you would have to do would be to get into the hole." "Oh," exclaimed the man. "But it notice me either."

"You are right." various matters. The man went with us to the end of the line and then returned. to the end of the line and then returned.

At the corner of Monroe street he said:

take my wife in case she faints. Then he jumped off. I was richer by $10. Thank God, there into a faint take her over to the drug are lucky days in a man's life. All winter long I had covered my chest with paper telling her. we stopped again and passengers got ity of an accident. What will happen my comrades feel me the next time to Finally we were nearing Monroe street. hear the paper crackle there will be no I thought that the eccentric young husband?

she looked at me with an open face. thought. "But you are somewhat to blame derly to the drug store." We were going toward the city. against the rule for the motorman to I noticed a black spot in the middle "This is the drug store where you should talk to passengers while he was on duty of the road in front of us. That must ing me whether there was really some To my great surprise I saw that the lady have been the head of the man above the one in the hole, adding that he could moved nearer to the motorman and that ground. she was listening intently to what he was noise any longer," I thought.

My car made three trips after the incident with the man and nothing hapquiet and there would be no one to hinder pened. But as we started out on the fourth him from getting into the hole. Then trip a young lady boarded the car near I recalled that I had seen people working Cottage station, and sat down near the for the company repairing the cable in There was the poor madman in the hole motorman. She were a brown fur coat. that same hole. But I knew that if he facing us. When I came over to collect the fare remained there while the car was passing he must lose his life.

*Poor woman, you will have to go Just before reaching Monroe street through a terrible experience soon," I I walked over to the motorman's platform. Neither the motorman nor the lady might happen that the motorman would and now you must pay the penalty. At was talking now. The last thing I noticed not notice me and that you would not any rate I shall be glad to carry you ten-was that the motorman shook his head; indicating that he agreed with her; and then he looked ahead and started the

I looked at the lady. Her eyes seemed fixed on the same spot and she clutched We were rolling along to the city. We her seat firmly. It seemed to me that topped, passengers boarded the cars; she was nervous because of the possibilwas enabled to buy a heavy coat. "When out. Things went smoothly, as usual. to her, I wondered, when she finds out that the man on the road was her own speed of the car. I shouted to him that there was a man in the hole in front of us, but he paid no attention to that. Now we could clearly see the man's head.

notorman kept going ahead at full speed. Another few seconds and the misfortune must occur. I began to ring the bell; it was too late. The car had passed over the hole before it could be stopped.

I jumped off the car greatly excited, Slow down a bit," I said to the motor- ance. I rushed back to the motorman's platform dreadfully agitated. The motorman was also confused. He kept askstop the car in time. The young woman

"How terrible! How terrible!"

She turned pale and clutched at her seat convulsively. But she did not faint. A little while later she stepped down from he motorman's platform and walked

A big crowd had gathered. The man was dead. His body was removed. The constable took the names of many of the people. All the witnesses testified that I signalled, whistled and even rushed over to the brake in my effort to stop the car. And then we were to be examined at the office. The motorman asked me to lend him my penknife. I did not quite understand what he intended to do with it. I said that we had had enough of one misfortune. Then he smiled and showed me his revolver. He said that he did not need the knife for any foolish act. Upon getting the knife he hade me good-by saving that he could not work any more on that car; he said that I would have to take the car back myself. He showed me how to do it. He then explained that he wanted my knife in order to cut off the buttons of his uniform. Then he went off. There was nothing else left for me to do but take the car back to the station. Behind me there were several cars waiting for me to start. And as I had had some experience in driving a car I brought it to the yard safely.

One evening, between Christmas and New Year's, I was roaming about in the city. As I neared one of the railroad stations I decided to go in for a while to see the departing trains. Suddenly some one called me by name. That was Pat. the motorman. It took me some time to recognize him: He was well dressed and his beard had been shaved off. I to recognize him: He was well cressed and his beard had been shaved off. I uttered an exclamation.

"Hush; not so loud! Well, how is the case?" asked Pat.

"We were examined," I replied. "Now they are looking for you."

Pat said: "I am going West. What is the use of staying here? I made $7 or $8 a week and it cost me $4 a week to live. I am going to get some land. I'll the a farmer. I have some money of course. If you want to come along we will find some good land near Frisco."

"I can't go with you," I answered.

"Oh, yes, by the way, here is your knife. Thank you for lending it to me. You see there is no future in working on the car. I have worked for three years and now I have my opportunity to break away from this work."

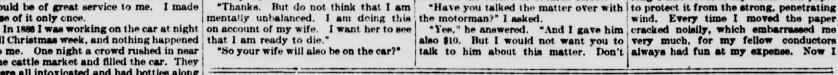

The whistle blew.

"Well, good-by," said Pat. "Listen. How much did you get from the man we ran over?"

"Ten dollars."

Ten dollars."

"Ten dollars."
"I got the same. He paid quite well, but his wife paid better."
"His wife?"
"His wife?"
"His young wife, ves. We fixed it up together. It was all the same to hell whether I wanted a thousand or two she had to get rid of her husband. Now I can start an easier life on the money she gave me."

"So your wife will also be on the car?"

"I LOOKED AT THE LADY. HER EYES SEEMED FIXED ON THE SAME SPOT."

"You will stop the car and drag me out is very good looking. If she should fall store on the corner of Monroe street."

will be able to recognize her easily. She

PURSUED CLOSELY BY A GREAT BIG UGLY FISH

won't be half so much fun, and it will be almost lifted my hat and hollered: all the more fun if you don't know how to fish yourself." Then the enthusiastic young man prostaying there a few minutes and saying a few words about Christmas and the ceeded to explain his proposition. "A friend and I," said he, "got our girls she was trying to keep it up. to go Greenwood Lake last Sunday. "'Hold on to it, Sue!' I shout We hadn't any idea what we were going it's a bite.' weather he jumped off, for there was little room on the car. I knew well that if the constable had said one word the passengers to do or see when we got there, and we would pay their fares, but I did not tell didn't seem to care, only so we ran against a good time. Why didn't you report us to the police-"On the way up I asked the conductor It shook itself like a dog shaking a rat said Sue reproachfully. 'Why in the of the train what we were likely to find and glared at us the maddest kind. Sue world didn't you think of that? The very "I didn't think it necessary to do that," I replied, "for I am dealing with gentle- at the lake to sort of round out a day with some fun mixed up with it. 'Do you folks dance?' said he.

"'Sure thing,' said I. "'Can you fish?' said he.

"No,' said I, positively. "None of you?' said he.

"'Not one of us,' I said.

cent pieces with gloves. There I had no fishing. When we got to the lake we went back under the water kerplunk, "That conductor sure did know what he strong sensations to experience, but I found a man who had boats and fishing and a second later came up out again in was talking about. Yes, yes. There's soon grew tired of seeing these villa things to hire, got a couple of boats, a the wake of our boat and not ten feet a heap more fun if you don't know how dwellers and listening to their conver- fishpole spiece and some bait, and pre- away. Then Sue just more than hollered. pared to go fishing.

On Christmas day of 1887 I experienced asked the man we hired the outfit from. "I don't know just what I would have "Know much about fishing?" he asked. set myself to work at doing if Sue hadn' something unusual even there. I was working then in the daytime. A gentleman boarded the car, and it was evident about fishing. that he was eager to talk with me. As

"'Don't make no difference then,' said she hollered.

"Well, what kind of fish do we catch?"

she hollered.

"I turned and looked in that direction for me on the rear platform and im- he, 'where you fish.' mediately resumed our interrupted conversation. He was a man of about 30, said I. "I rushed out of my house without pond."

the conductor had handed us, and I con- us, the one on Sue's line and now one on sidered that we were following the right mine.

path to overhaul fun, so after the man "Then I certainly did yell for my friend "How much are you earning here?" and as the situation was all to the restful on to the meaning of that hurry call, while at eighty-four miles they were so

"If your girl doesn't know how to fish." and Sue was taking 'em for all they were other great jump in the air and with a enthusiastically declared the young fel- worth and now and then murmuring one tremendous lunge tore loose from the low who clerks in a bank, "take her out or two back to me, the fishing stunt kind hook and didn't come for us again. Folof charge for fear that there might be some spies in the employ of the company who real fun. If she knows how to fish it all of a sudden she gave a scream that

> "Oh, Charlie, something is trying to take my fishpole away from me! "I looked, and sure enough, her fishpole was being jerked down in the water and him of our adventure he didn't seem to "Hold on to it, Sue!' I shouted. 'Maybe it for a while. Then he said:

side of the boat a big fish jumped out of and land 'em in your boat?' the water with Sue's hook in its mouth. "Why of course it would, Charlie! screamed louder than ever and hollered: "'It's jumping at me, Charlie; why don't you kill the horrid thing?'

it while I rowed fast to the spot where the yelled that the fish was after her pole fish had jumped out intending to slaugh- again. Whether it was the same one or ter it with an oar if it sprang out again, not I don't know, but it looked exactly but when I got there the ugly critter had like it when it jumped and we got it in "Then go fishin', said he, and passed on. moved and came leaping out twenty feet the boat and killed it with an oar. A lot "We thought it was kind of queer ad-vice, but the conductor seemed to know ever. I knew my friend had his pistol over and most of 'em we didn't yank what he was talking about, and we made with him and I turned to yell to him to in and land, but we had heaps of fun up our minds to take his advice and go hurry over to us with it when the fish seeing em get away.

"'Oh, it's chasing us, Charlie!' she hol-"Where's the best place to fish?' I lered. 'Pull for shore and call for help!' "I don't know just what I would have "I told him we didn't know a thing screamed again right on the heels of her last veil:

"Oh, now it's heading us off, Charlie!

just in time to see the big fish glaring at only the direction of the wind, but its 'If you don't know how to fish,' said us off our bow and shaking itself in the relative velocity at different elevations the man, 'there ain't no tellin' what you air till everything rattled. At least I from the ground, affected the direction won't ketch, the way fish bites in this thought it was that big fish until out of of the sound waves. In some cases the water astern of us it came again and contrary winds refracted the sounds "This seemed to bear out the advice then I discovered that two fish were after over the heads of observers between ten had told us how to bait our hooks we to get in there on the double quick with the ground by favorable upper currents, rowed out on the lake and went to fish- that gun of his. Seems to me that those rendering the sounds audible at fifty Our boats drifted about for a while, two big and ugly fish must have caught and dreamy I was passing quite a few for while my friend was on his way in loud that laborers in the fields put down of the Yankee there is noth-lover to Sue in the line of soft nothings, answer to it the fish on my line gave one their spades to listen to them.

"Oh, thank goodness, Charlie, He's gone at last! "When my friend came up and we told have words to make any comment on "Wonder why it wouldn't have been "Just then about twenty feet from one the proper thing to yank them fish in

"I wondered a little at it myself and declared that we would try for 'em again. "I put my pole on the seat and sat on We did and it wasn't long before Sue

> "That conductor sure did know what he to fish and if your girl don't know how than there is in knowing how."

VAGARIES OF SOUND During the firing of minute guns by the British fleet at Spithead on one occasion the sounds were heard at surprising distances inland, and the scientists gathered many interesting facts. It seems to be established that not and forty-five miles from the ships, so that they did not hear the guns, but the same waves were afterward brought to miles, and even as far as 140 miles

KNUT HAMSUN, NOTED SCANDINAVIAN AUTHOR.